There are more doors in the western world than there are people. We interact with them countless times during our daily lives. However, their basic design and use has changed little since their inception.

ThreeStyle, complimented by its brothers and sisters within ThreeRange, is an introduction into the potential of these passive gateways between environments, commonly known as doors.

A functional piece of contemporary design playfully exploring possibility? A way of introducing innovative interactive features into a living space? Or an obvious progression, giving the little people in our lives a greater connection with their environment during their growth through childhood? We welcome your thoughts and views.....

Slam's expression of the ThreeStyle concept is constantly evolving. It is soon to be joined by a new wave of doors which combine design, flexibility and functionality changing the way we view and use this humble object.

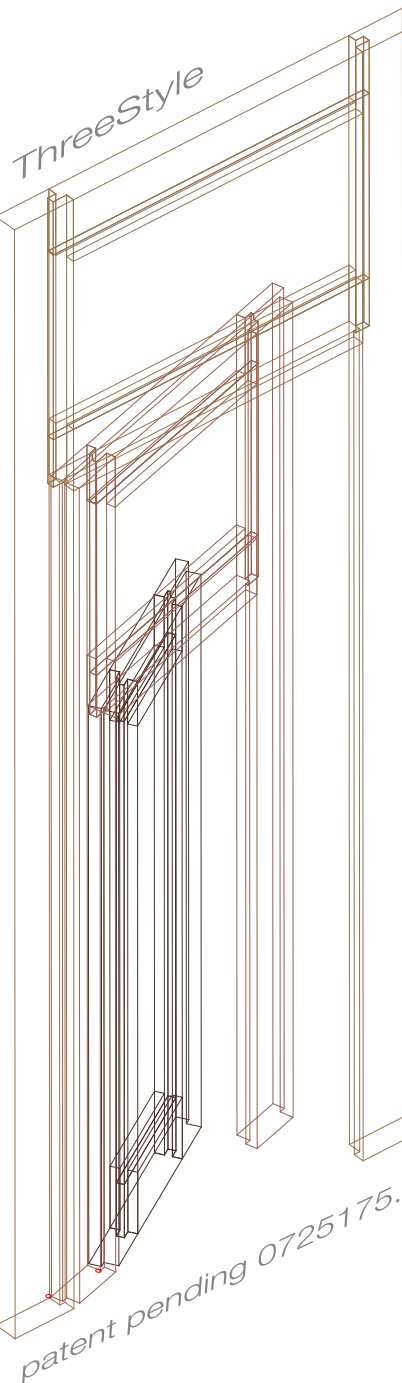

Please feel free to contact us for further information, availability and to discuss how slam can help enhance your environment.
